

Launch Your Own Nutritional Supplement In 7 Easy Steps

The market for nutritional supplements is tremendous, and it is estimated to be $43.8 Billion and growing at 6.2% every year. The global market is thought to be $140 Billion with an 8.6% growth estimate (1). Having your own brand allows you to leverage your client/patient loyalty to further support their overall health and wellness, while simultaneously adding an additional revenue stream to your business.

Get started by following these 7 easy steps:

1. Determine a healthcare goal that uses supplements to support a long-term successful healthcare plan based on your client-base needs.
2. Develop a program using your supplement, such as a healthy eating or exercise plan, or create FAQs and white papers outlining the benefits of using the benefits of the product you choose.
3. Choose a standard stock formula that is already available, or you can opt to design your own unique formula.
4. Fine-tune your marketing plan using office displays, pamphlets, a website, or other ways you plan to educate and server your clients. Initially, this may be the most important key to success.
5. Create your own brand and use a private label supplement company that can help and support you along the way.
6. Choose a supplier that values service and quality and will work hard to manage the private label process from product/formula and label design to production and shipping.
7. Start slowly while testing and tailoring your marketing initiatives for success.
